

The Man Who Fired the Temple.
Among the events of the famous Mormon war was the burning of the Temple. The structure was burned at night, and the successful was the party suggested in the burning. The party was never even suspected. The recent death of the incendiary, however, has removed the necessity of further secrecy, and a day or two ago we were put in possession of his name and the facts connected with the burning of the Temple by the only living person cognizant of them. The Temple was fired by Joseph B. Agnew, who recently died in Appanoose township, Hancock county, in this State, at the age of some fifty-eight years. It was always supposed that the party who burned the building had entered through the basement, but the facts are, Mr. Agnew surreptitiously obtained a key to one of the doors of the Temple some time before the act. No one was engaged with him, and only four knew he was the party. Three of these are now dead. Agnew procured his first balls and other combustibles at his residence. Placing them in his saddlebag, he rode on horseback to Nauvoo, and in the night entered the Temple with his key, passed up to the cupola, arranged his materials, and fired them, and then quietly escaped the way he came. Our informant, who is a respectable and prominent citizen of the western part of the State, says he thinks he can procure the key of the Temple which Agnew secured in order to accomplish his work.—Poria (Ill.) Transcript.

A Singular Suit.
Lord Romilly, the British Master of the Rolls, has recently given judgment in a singular suit. In 1861, Mr. Gilchrist, a wealthy resident in Calcutta, induced the widow of a merchant named Farquhar to marry him by the persuasive argument contained in these words addressed to her: "If you will decline Dr. Evans and marry me, I will settle on you £10,000 for pin money, and I will make a will leaving you half of my fortune, and that will shall not be altered." The Dr. Evans referred to had proposed for her at the time this offer was made. Mr. Gilchrist, despite his apparent attachment, abandoned his wife after the first nine weeks of their married life. They lived together again after an interval of two years, but soon agreed to separate, she accepting an annuity of $2,000 during their joint lives, and $1,000 for her life after his death. In 1868 Mr. Gilchrist died, leaving the whole of his property, amounting to $700,000, to his only daughter by a former marriage. His widow, having sued for half that amount in accordance with the promise quoted, Lord Romilly decided that she was entitled to it, and awarded the remainder of the estate to the daughter.

In his lecture on Artemus Ward, Mark Twain tells the following: When Artemus was very young, he and a companion got hold of a pack of cards and learned to play euchre. Artemus was perfectly fascinated with the game, and played it as often as he had an opportunity; but it had to be done on the sly, and he had to hide his cards from his parents. So, when he was looking out for a place to hide them, the boys thought the safest place where they could put the cards was in the pocket of the minister's black gown, having used the very same means, but it's a good word, and I suppose it's all right. Well, the old minister was called on to baptize a convert, and as he went down into the water wearing a gown, the cards began to come up to the surface and float off. The boys were on the bank watching, though in great fear, kept their eyes on the cards. As it happened, there came up two bowlers and three aces. Of course the boys were thrilled, and an old aunt of Artemus proceeded to lecture him on the enormity of the crime. "Why," said she, "just imagine how the poor man must have felt when he saw the cards coming up! I should have thought he would have fainted, and I don't see how he got out." "Well," said Artemus, "I don't see how he could help going out on such a hand."

A married woman of the Shawnee Indians made this beautiful reply to a man whom she met in the woods, and who implored her to love and look on him: "Old man, my husband," said she, "who is for ever before my eyes, hinders me from seeing you or any other person."

CITY MEAT MARKET.

Especially for the trade of Central Kansas. And

To Dealers,
I plainly inform you, and I am prepared to back up every assertion, that I will furnish a far better cigar in every respect,

For Less Money,
Than any foreign cigar that has been or will be brought to this market.

To those Unacquainted
I will inform you of an old-established rule of the trade. Manufacturers invariably retain for their home trade their best cigars, made from selected stock. Their second quality goes to the foreign dealers, under the same brand, knowing that they can not control a foreign trade; but the home trade they can control, or a portion of it, if their goods are worth any thing. I am engaged

EXCLUSIVELY
IN THE CIGAR and TOBACCO
BUSINESS.

I stand right up to my business, and I claim to

"You Know How 'Tis Yourself!"

When a person wants to buy cheap, he goes where they sell cheap and one ought to sell at "his real price."

"Which is Why"
So many are disposed to call on

FLANDERS & MARLIN.
"Which is the Same I Rise to Explain"

In the first place, they buy and sell for cash, always buy as low as the lowest, and by selling for cash can afford to do business on a much smaller margin than if they sold on time.

"And My Reason is Plain."
For they do not have to charge their good-paying customers extra prices in order to make up what they lose on poor-paying ones.

"And the same I am free to Maintain"
Consequently I think
